Thank You, Kirsten for your love and ministry to our family of faith!

To everything there is a season...

My spirituality has always been grounded in nature, and nature has always provided a deep reflection of my faith. So now as the seasons change and my formal role at CTK is changing, I am both sad and excited.

Mostly, my heart is overflowing with gratitude for all the people here who have been the face of Christ to me - people who have mentored me, offered patience, shown forgiveness, helped me discover my talents and strengths, AND challenged me to use them! I have learned generosity, compassion and conviction because so many of you have modeled it for me.

CTK was created to be a laboratory for the teachings of Vatican II and to be a public witness to the value of University of Montana students, faculty, and staff. Now, as much as ever, we need to embrace that identity and mission. The reason I felt so called to ministry seventeen years ago was in large part due to the home you all created for me here as a student. It was a safe space for me to wrestle with and question my faith, explore difficult questions without judgement, and learn to trust how God was moving in my life.

So my last call to action is this - reach out and connect! It could be a simple "hello" or "welcome," or an invite to coffee or dinner. We ALL need connection, now more than ever. CTK will always be my family, and now my challenge - our challenge - is to continue building a safe place where anyone who finds their way to our doors can wrestle with their faith, find space to explore difficult questions without judgement, and learn to trust God.
